1. INTRODUCTION

The Turnbull National Wildlife Refuge Habitat Management Plan (USDI 1999) and the Refuge's Draft Turnbull Comprehensive Conservation Plan/Environmental Assessment (CCP/EA) identify the need to protect certain lands surrounding the Turnbull National Wildlife Refuge. The CCP/EA evaluates different alternative strategies for land protection, and considers the environmental consequences of each alternative, including taking no action.

This Land Protection Plan briefly describes the biological resources, threats, goals / objectives, and the protection methods being considered for the area under the Draft CCP/EA preferred alternative (Alternative 3). More detailed information is available in the Draft CCP/EA, especially Chapters 2 and 3. In tables and maps, the Land Protection Plan also displays parcels within the proposed Stewardship Area and each parcel's priority for protection. The extent of the land protection strategies enacted will be contingent on availability of funds.

The area studied for land protection in the Draft CCP/EA encompasses part of a globally unique geological area known as the Channeled Scablands. Its diverse landscape resulted from several massive Ice Age flood events that scoured potholes, sloughs, and deep canyons out of the pre-existing lava plains. An extensive complex of deep permanent sloughs, semi-permanent potholes and seasonal wetlands formed in the depressions left in the scoured landscape, while uplands were left with little to none of the original 400-foot deep loess soils that had been present before the floods. Today, soils only centimeters thick on upland sites support primarily ponderosa pine intermixed with grasslands (steppe) and exposed basalt cliffs. Aspen is scattered throughout the area. The juxtaposition of all these contrasting habitats in such close proximity is a distinctive marker of the Channeled Scablands and creates conditions of exceptional wildlife and plant diversity.

Due to the unusual topography and soil conditions rendered by the floods, Turnbull and its surrounding habitats in the Study Area comprise a unique assemblage of habitats in a semi-arid and fragile landscape. The Service is compelled to pursue protecting the integrity of the Channeled Scablands before habitat loss, fragmentation, and isolation compromise its habitat values.

Protection and conservation of lands as envisioned under this Land Protection Plan would provide an opportunity to protect, restore and enhance wetland, aspen/riparian, Palouse steppe, and ponderosa pine habitats; assist in the recovery of federally listed species, including water howellia (Howellia aquatilis); and preserve the rich biological diversity of a region that has been largely converted to agricultural or urban uses.

The current Approved Refuge Boundary<sup>1</sup> for the Turnbull National Wildlife Refuge measures 20,827 acres. Within the Approved Boundary 15,656 acres have been acquired in fee by the Service and an additional 2,156 acres are under lease or agreement.

<sup>1</sup> A project boundary which the Director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service approves upon completion of the planning and environmental compliance process. An approved refuge boundary only designates those lands which the Fish and Wildlife Service has authority to acquire and/or manage through various agreements.

2. THREATS TO AND STATUS OF THE RESOURCE

A full and complete description of the resources contained within the Study Area and threats to these resources as well as existing Refuge land can be found in Chapter 3, Sections 3.1-3.3 of the Draft CCP/EA. To summarize very briefly here, the integrity of the Channeled Scablands habitats and the species depending on these habitats is threatened by encroaching urban development, excessive groundwater withdrawals, forest overharvest, intensive agricultural development, and ranching practices. The need for protection stems from the following reasons:

- 1) Refuge purposes could be threatened if action is not taken to protect sources of Refuge water. Groundwater is especially critical to support migratory waterbird breeding at Refuge wetlands but both shallow and deep aquifers are being increasingly tapped for residential and urban development.
- 2) Widespread land conversion to agricultural and residential uses in the surrounding area has threatened the connectivity of the Refuge to other native habitats, undermining biological integrity.
- 3) The Channeled Scablands, of which the Refuge is a piece, is an area of regional and national conservation importance. Crossing several counties in eastern and central Washington state, the Scablands contains densities of wetland basins rivaling the Prairie Pothole region, and at intact sites, waterfowl production exceeds that of the Potholes region. Yet most of the larger wetland basins have been drained and very little of the original Channeled Scablands area is under any kind of public ownership or protected in any other fashion.
- 4) The area is identified as an important site in the Partners In Flight Columbia Plateau plan, the Nature Conservancy's Columbia Plateau Ecoregion Plan, the Draft Intermountain West Waterbird Conservation Plan, and the Draft Recovery Plan for Water Howellia. In addition, the Refuge itself is currently designated an Important Bird Area by the Audubon Society.
- 5) A broadbased common vision and collective drive for conservation work of this kind is very much alive in this area, as evidenced by the partnership activity already well underway in the Channeled Scablands area. The Refuge is a partner to an ongoing effort by fourteen public and private organizations to protect and restore wetlands and riparian areas within the Channeled Scablands. Two million dollars in federal North American Wetland Conservation Act (NAWCA) grants were recently awarded to this project, and partners have put up a total of nearly ten million dollars in matching and in-kind funds.
- 6) The Channeled Scablands also host the majority of the last remnants of the Palouse steppe vegetation community which is recognized nationally as a critically endangered ecosystem (Noss et.al. 1995) and was furthermore identified as the top Conservation Priority by the State GAP analysis (Cassidy et al, 1996).

3. PROPOSED ACTION AND GOALS / OBJECTIVES

The Land Protection Plan encompasses a set of strategies to protect certain valuable habitats and resources within the Channeled Scablands geological formation. This action is being proposed to protect the water quality and quantity for the wildlife and habitat at the established Refuge; to protect a critically endangered ecosystem (Palouse steppe); to provide opportunities to restore numerous wetland basins to aquatic conditions; to provide further protection for intact wetlands, ponderosa pine, and aspen communities; and to provide further protection for species in decline over widespread areas of the Interior Columbia Basin.

The Service proposes to establish a Stewardship Area surrounding the Refuge, which would measure approximately 44,536 acres. This area includes the 5,171 acres within the current Approved Refuge Boundary not acquired in fee. The Stewardship Area would function as an informally designated conservation zone surrounding the Refuge. Within the Stewardship Area, the Service would actively work with partners and neighbors for voluntary, cooperative activities that protect habitat and water resources. Key tools include but are not limited to: conservation easements, enrollment in the Wetlands Reserve Program, and technical assistance programs. Another innovative measure that could be used is installing casing on deep wells (which would prevent water from the shallow aquifer from cascading down to the deep aquifer). Easements on wells could also be obtained to limit or prevent groundwater withdrawals.

In addition, the Service would seek to protect, as part of the National Wildlife Refuge System, up to 12,000 acres of priority lands from willing sellers within the Stewardship Area, through fee, easement or agreement. These 12,000 acres would be in addition to the 5,171 acres of inholdings located inside the current Approved Refuge Boundary. Based on the percentages of habitat types estimated in the Study Area, this would equate to protection under the Refuge System of approximately 2,156 acres of wetlands; 3,637 acres of steppe; 6,092 acres of ponderosa pine; and 115 acres of aspen / riparian.

The Service would work in partnership with others, adding to efforts already underway. Two NAWCA grants were awarded recently in the amount of nearly two million dollars for protection and restoration of wetland and riparian habitats in Spokane, Lincoln, and Adams Counties in Washington State. These first two grants fund Phases 1 and 2 of a five-phase project plan for the Intermountain West Joint Venture Channeled Scablands Focus Area (CSFA). Fourteen public and private organizations provided matching and in-kind funds in the amount of $3.2 million (Phase 2) and $6.2 million (Phase 1). The organizations include: Ducks Unlimited, Spokane County Parks and Recreation Dept., Spokane County Conservation District, U.S. Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Natural Resources Conservation Service, The Nature Conservancy, Avista Corporation, U.S. Farm Services Agency, Washington Dept. of Fish and Wildlife, Inland Northwest Wildlife Council, Inland Northwest Land Trust, Friends of Turnbull National Wildlife Refuge, and Spokane Audubon Society. Numerous private landowners are also partners in the project. The goals of Phase 1 and Phase 2 of the project are to acquire, restore, and enhance over 15,000 acres of wetland, riparian, and adjacent upland habitat within the area covered by the CSFA Implementation Plan.

Implementing the Land Protection Plan would contribute to the fulfillment of seven of the eight refuge goals and numerous objectives (the objectives are not listed here but are detailed in Chapter 2 of the Draft CCP/EA).

Goal 1: Contribute to protection of local watersheds so as to maintain adequate water quality and quantity for native refuge wetland species.

Goal 2: Provide habitat conditions essential to the conservation of birds and other wildlife within a variety of wetland complexes.

Goal 3: Restore Refuge aspen and ponderosa forest to a natural distribution of stand structural and successional stages to benefit forest dependent wildlife.

Goal 4: Protect and restore the natural distribution and diversity of grassland and shrub steppe habitats to benefit wildlife.

Goal 5: Support the conservation of threatened and endangered species in their natural ecosystems.

Goal 6: Support the maintenance of biologically effective landscape linkages and corridors between the Refuge and other intact areas of vegetation zones representative of this ecoregion.

Goal 7: Foster appreciation and support of the Refuge and the Channeled Scablands ecosystem through quality environmental education, interpretation, wildlife-dependent recreation, and outreach compatible with the Refuge purposes and mission.

If the proposed Land Protection Plan is approved together with the Draft CCP/EA, the Service would have the authority to enter into purchase agreements, conservation easements, and cooperative agreements with interested landowners within the boundaries of the Stewardship Area. Lands acquired by the Service would be managed as part of the National Wildlife Refuge System under the National Wildlife Refuge System Administration Act of 1966, as amended.

4. HABITAT PROTECTION METHODS

Service policy is to adopt habitat protection measures and strategies that involve acquiring the minimum possible interest or rights in lands and waters and still meet the defined resource objectives. It is also Service policy to acquire land from willing sellers and to enter into cooperative agreements with interested participants. Any landowner within the Stewardship Area who has no interest in selling his or her property would be under no obligation to sell to the Service. The Service is required by law to offer fair-market value for all land purchases. The value is based on a professional appraisal completed in accordance with the Uniform Standards for Federal Land Acquisitions. Appraisal values are based on the highest and best use of the property which considers current zoning and market conditions. Federal funds to acquire these lands would become available primarily through appropriations from Migratory Bird Conservation Fund or possibly annual appropriations by Congress from the Land and Water Conservation Fund.

Under the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Policies Act, Federal agencies provide benefits to persons whose residences or businesses are displaced. Such benefits may include reimbursement of reasonable moving and related expenses; replacement housing payments; and reimbursement of certain necessary and reasonable expenses incurred in selling real property to the Federal government.

Although the Service would consider a wide variety of protection methods available (e.g. fee title, easement, lease, agreement, permit, license) to achieve land protection goals, the Service anticipates the following methods would be the preferred techniques for this project.

4.1 Fee Title Acquisition or Lease

The Service acquires land by fee title from willing sellers, assembling tracts into a manageable unit. Fee title is used when (1) the land's fish, wildlife, and plant resources require permanent protection which is not otherwise available; (2) the land is needed for development associated with a priority wildlife-dependent public use; or (3) a pending land use could otherwise harm wildlife or their habitats. Fee title may be acquired by purchase, donation, exchange, or transfer.

4.2 Conservation Easements

With a conservation easement, the landowner permanently sells or donates some, but not all, property rights to the Service as specified by mutual agreement. An easement could cover only a portion of the property or limit certain uses of the property.

4.3 Cooperative Agreements and Memorandums of Understanding

The Service can enter into cooperative agreements with landowners to improve wildlife and habitat management. Cooperative agreements may specify shared responsibilities or a transfer of funds from the Service to another entity or vice-versa for management purposes. The Service can also enter into Memorandums of Understanding with landowners for the Service to oversee certain aspects of resource management on lands the Service does not own.

5. LAND PROTECTION PRIORITIES

Each of the resource factors described in section 5.1 was mapped for the Study Area (see Chapter 3) and overlaid with the taxlot (parcels) map provided by Spokane County. Resource factors (if present) and associated weights were assigned to each taxlot. A total Resource Sum Value score was assigned based on the sum of the weighted resource values.

Taxlots with total scores of 18 or above or in the groundwater buffer zone were grouped into the first order priority group if they also measured at least 35 acres (size of tax lot was incorporated into the priority ranking because larger tax lots can contribute more towards connectivity and resource values). Second order priorities included those taxlots with scores 18 and above or in the ground water zone and measuring over 20 but less than 35 acres. Also included in the second order priority grouping were taxlots not in the groundwater buffer zone but with scores between 8 and 17 and measuring at least 20 acres but less than 35 acres. Third order priority taxlots included everything not in the high or medium groups.

Map 14 displays the Stewardship Area with each parcel colored by its priority grouping. Map 15 (overview map and additional sheets) shows locations of individual taxlots in the Stewardship Area in more detail (each taxlot is labeled with the Service tract number).

Table A.1 lists the parcels within the proposed Refuge expansion boundary. Each parcel is identified by the Service's tract number (several separate parcels owned by one landowner are generally given the same tract number), County APN Number (Assessor's Parcel Number or PID_ from the county database), the Service's unique numerical identifier (FWSNUM), landowner name, acres (as calculated under GIS), the resource factors present on that parcel, total score based on a sum of the weighted resource factors present, and Service priority for protection.

5.1 Resource Factors Considered in Prioritization

- Groundwater influence zone - ½ mile buffer to south and west of Refuge; 1 mile buffer to north and east - critical for maintaining wetland area and depth on Refuge especially during summer months and drought years (See map 9 in Chapter 3)
- Surface watersheds - critical for maintaining wetland area, depth, and water quality on Refuge (See map 7 in Chapter 3)
- Priority intact (undrained) wetlands and most likely restorable drained wetlands (those that straddle 2 ownerships or less) - significant migratory waterfowl habitat; also provides potential habitat for bald eagles, and threatened species Howellia and Spiranthes (See map 8 in Chapter 3)
- High quality Palouse steppe habitat - highest conservation priority under State GAP analysis; also provides potential habitat for threatened species Silene, several PIF focal species, and several Region 1 species of management concern (See map 11 in Chapter 3)
- High quality ponderosa pine - habitat for several Partners In Flight focal species; state candidate species; also provides connectivity to additional forest habitat to the northeast (See map 12 in Chapter 3)
- Potential for adding recreational opportunities to the Refuge, especially where hunting opportunities appear viable.

6. SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC IMPACTS

Enacting various land protection strategies could alter spending, land uses, and recreational opportunities within the area. See Chapter 4 of the EA for more analysis of the social and economic impacts of land protection together with other actions undertaken in the Draft CCP/EA.

7. COORDINATION

The Service encouraged input from landowners, other individuals in the community, conservation organizations, and Federal, Tribal, State, and local governments to identify concerns and issues and to explore alternative Refuge expansion boundaries. See Appendix K of the CCP/EA for the summary of public involvement that occurred during development of the CCP and the Refuge land protection proposal.

In addition, the Service has been integrally involved in the Channeled Scablands Focus Area partnership as described under section 3.
